

Identify the following closing lines - give title and author of each work:

But I reckon I got to light out for the Territory ahead of the rest, because Aunt Sally she's going to adopt me and sivilize me and I can't stand it. I been there before.

"It is a far, far better thing that I do, than I have ever done; it is a fear, far better rest that I go to than I have ever known."

Now small fowls flew screaming over the yet yawning gulf; a sullen white surf beat against its steep sides; then all collapsed, and the great shroud of the sea rolled on as it rolled five thousand years ago.

I do not say that John or Jonathan will realize all this; but such is the character of that morrow which mere lapse of time can never make to dawn. The light which puts out our eyes is darkness to us. Only that day dawns to which we are awake. There is more day to dawn. The sun is but a morning star.

Take up the bodies. Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot.

And what man can teach man to understand this? Or what Angel, an Angel? Or what Angel, a man? Let it be asked of Thee, sought in Thee, knocked for at Thee. So, so shall it be received, so shall it be found, so shall it be opened. Amen.

The hour of departure has arrived, and we go our ways - I to die, and you to live. Which is better God only knows.

So they performed the funeral rites of Hektor, tamer of horses.

And what of the value of dreams in regard to our knowledge of the future? That, of course, is quite out of the question. One would like to substitute the words: "in regard to our knowledge of the past." For in every sense a dream has its origin in the past. The ancient belief that dreams reveal the future is not indreed entirely devoid of truth. By representing a wish as fulfilled the dream certainly leads us into the future; but this future, which the dreamer accepts as his present, has been shaped in the likeness of the past by the indestructible wish.
